

CPU Emergency – CPU Recipient Agreement

- Recipient agrees to lease and pay for [AMOUNT] EOS of CPU for a period of [NUMBER] weeks.
- Recipient agrees to pay CPU Emergency weekly [X%], which equals an amount of [AMOUNT] EOS per week, to [CPU EMERGENCY'S EOS ACCOUNT NAME].
- Recipient agrees to pay CPU Emergency for the first week's payment immediately upon execution of this agreement. Term will begin upon delegation of CPU. Recipient agrees to pay CPU Emergency for all payments due for additional weeks at least 24 hours prior to the start of the next week. Recipient may receive a 5% discount for full term payment in advance on any term four weeks or greater.
- Recipient agrees to send a link to the payment transaction to @riverkingfisher on Telegram immediately following such payment.
- Recipient may terminate this agreement at any time by paying a termination fee equal to one week's payment, except for full term payments in advance for which we will also recoup the 5% discount.
- Recipient may be blacklisted from future agreements if Recipient fails to make timely payment or otherwise fails to comply with the terms of this agreement.

CPU Emergency receives and holds in escrow the payment from the Recipient on a weekly basis; therefore, if CPU delegator undelegates or takes any action that will undelegate the CPU from Recipient's account prior to the expiration of the weekly term, then CPU Emergency will refund that week's payment to Recipient in full.

Because CPU Emergency has no control over CPU delegator's account, CPU Emergency accepts no liability for any losses that Recipient may incur due to CPU delegator undelegating prior to the end of the agreed upon term or any other actions of CPU delegator and Recipient waives any and all claims against CPU Emergency. CPU Emergency's OTC CPU service allows Recipient to retain full control over its account at all times. CPU Emergency will not request and does not need or want your private keys.